AUSTURLAND
Experience & Route Map

Austurland – The eastern part of Iceland

Austurland, as we call East Iceland, covers an area of 15,792 km² and is inhabited by 10,300 people. It boasts a dramatic coastline, narrow fjords, vast highlands and mountains, plus numerous waterfalls that together, frame a fertile inland.

Breiðalssetur
Geology - Linguistics - History

The Breiðalssetur Center is housed in the oldest building in the East Icelandic village of Breiðalsvík where the local co-op store was operated from 1906 - 1957. The Center facilitates earth science and literary research focused on East Iceland, as well as exhibitions on the region's geology, linguistics and local history.

Exhibitions include the work of well-known geologist Dr. George P.L. Walker, writer and linguist Dr. Stefan Einarsson from Höskuldastaðir and the history of the house and surrounding area.
